

That's right. They're railroad spikes.

This feeder is charged with a full gondola of them; including tramp material and malformed pieces.

Parts are elevated, spread and conveyed for operator inspection and sorting.

Automatic sorting is not practical, here, because of the severity and frequency of bad parts.

Spikes are inspected at 200 pieces, per minute, within 85 dBA sound pressure.

Hammer down...

... your production costs

Get quiet, practical productive feeders from SPECTRUM.

Call, write or drop in.

